

THE GREAT AMERICAN HOME.

AS IT LOOKS TO THE INSUROR

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—Is the business world worried over the possibility of change in administration? Not so you could notice it. The business world is rather calm. The idea of a change. Why? One of them elucidate. The new crowd, he explained, is a bunch of new money into the town. Men getting into government jobs spend more freely the first few months than after they have been a few years. The old money have to sell what real estate they hold. New-comers are buying. That means more commissions for real estate firms. More business for decorators, movers, plumbers.

Business perks up right smart after an army of new government officials begin coming to Washington.

Washingtonians who live on the Virginia side of the Potomac may have the idea of a change in administration. This is according to law. They just learned that.

Dayton, Va., a carnival center, ground wheels of fortune. The old battleship Indiana is to be sacrificed to the cause of naval efficiency. Squadron of naval aviators will drop bombs on the coast of the sea. Each bomb will carry 1,000 pounds of TNT. It will leave any remnants of the battleship the Atlantic fleet will use as a floating target.

One-tenth of the new "plebs" at West Point will come from the ranks of the army. Sixty-four privates have been appointed. The number ever taken into the academy from the ranks of the army.

The department announces that a high school graduate will be admitted to West Point after one year of service.

Navigators Have Well Paid Jobs

Among the many trades, professions and sciences taught at the Marine Corps Institute, the study of Navigation holds an important part, says Sergeant Edward Horne, U. S. Marine Recreational Station, 215 Main Street. Are you sea-going? Do you like to travel? If you do, why not prepare yourself for the examinations by enrolling in the Marine Corps for two, three or four years?

The U. S. Merchant Marine is paying handsome salaries to men qualified as navigators. Living expenses, board and lodging, with a large salary and an opportunity for outdoor life and real adventure and travel. What more could a red-blooded man desire? No man on a Merchant Marine ship is poorly paid. Navigators earn about $400 or more a month, and this with expenses amounts to about $8,000 a year.

The course is like all Marine Corps Institute International Correspondence courses, easily learned, and beginners who have a fear of mathematics and tables need not hold back on that account, for the course is one that may be mastered by anyone of ordinary intelligence.

Enlist today and enroll; avoid the rush, for there are many enrolling, and it is well to get in on the ground floor. It's a real course, and navigation is a real red-blooded life work for a man.

If you do not care to take up the Navigation course, there are eighty-four more courses, including all sorts of well paying trades, and you can have your choice.
